you've lost this capability and if we do it for prison, we could perhaps just as well shoot for the Animal Research Building because I don't see any difference between one building and the other. It's the method in how you budget and this is what we're going against when we do not take the one year to develop what the Budget Committee calls for a program statement.

PRESIDENT: Still discussing the Mahoney amendment. Senator Duis.

SENATOR DUIS: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I, I wanted to--I mean Mr. President, I want to address myself to Senator Proud. Senator Proud, the thing that bothers me is you asked of the Budget Committee if they could get onto this. I think we're being unfair to the Budget Committee inasmuch as they've come in to us with their recommendations of what they've heard. I would imagine that some of these amendments, most of them, are probably as much as surprise to them as they are to us and I don't think there's anybody including their fiscal staff, can keep up with them as fast as they're passed here. You see, what happens with the very first amendment of Du--of Senator Snyder's that passed, from then on you have a runaway because the moment you pass somebody's amendment then all the rest of them come along and follow up and if you can get enough of them on there, why you don't have any more trouble because everybody's locked in, but, so I would, I would say this of the Budget Committee, I admire them for what they've done. They have given us a capital construction budget that has been realistic and I don't believe that we can call on them to make an explanation of these as these amendments come up. I think the only way they could do it is if they had all these amendments before they were adopted and then were able to sit down and analyze them and bring them back to us but we're not giving them that opportunity.

PRESIDENT: Senator Proud, do you care to respond?

SENATOR PROUD: Yes. I agree with Senator Duis. We're moving much too rapidly and, although I expect the motion to fail. It is my considered judgment for whatever it's worth and I know what some of you think it's worth. I make the motion that we'll, State of Nebraska a great service at this point in time in adjourning until 9:00 A.M. tomorrow morning and I so move.

PRESIDENT: Motion is to adjourn until 9:00 tomorrow morning. Is there any other business to come before the body? Alright, we have a new bill here to be read in. Stand by a minute, Senator Carpenter, will you?

CLERK: Mr. President, LB 583A (reads bill)

PRESIDENT: Well, is Senator Marvel in the chamber? Okay. Automatic A bill--fine, dandy. Any other business to come before the body? Senator Carpenter, then Senator Waldron.

SENATOR CARPENTER: What's before the body?

PRESIDENT: We don't have anything before the body except adjournment.

SENATOR CARPENTER: Well that's plenty.

PRESIDENT: Pardon me, sir?

SENATOR CARPENTER: That's a plenty. Now let's look at this.
